

ANDREW CARNEGIE DIES THIS MORNING AT HIS SUMMER HOME

STEEL MAGNATE VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA AFTER AN ILLNESS OF THREE DAYS

Death Comes So Suddenly, That Daughter, Mrs. Rosewell Miller, is Unable to Reach His Bedside Before He Breathes His Last; Wife and Secretary With Him.

AN ADVOCATE OF WORLD PEACE, WAR IS A HARD BLOW

By Associated Press.

LENNOX, MASS., Aug. 11.—Andrew Carnegie, steel magnate and philanthropist, died at his Lennox summer home "Shadowbrook" at 7:10 this morning after an illness of less than three days with bronchial pneumonia.

So sudden was his death that his daughter, Mrs. Rosewell Miller, was unable to get to her father's bedside before he died. His wife and private secretary were with him at the end.

Mr. Carnegie had spent most of the summer at Lennox, coming here in May, and up to a few weeks ago enjoyed himself in almost daily fishing trips on the lake that borders his big "Shadowbrook" estate, and a riding about his grounds. He was taken ill Friday and grew steadily worse.

Mr. Carnegie came to Lennox to make his home in May, 1917, and had spent the last three summers here. He intended to spend his declining days at his country home here and when he bought it an announcement was made that Mr. Carnegie would spend all of the spring and summer months there. He came up from New York late in May.

Mr. Carnegie leaves his widow, who was Miss Louise Whitfield of New York, and his daughter, Margaret, who married, last April, Eugene Rosewell Miller of New York.

Mr. Carnegie's physicians said he frequently overtaxed his strength by seeing all callers at his home here. Two years ago Mr. Carnegie found a refuge at "Shadowbrook," his new summer home at Lennox, which he purchased from the estate of Anson Phelps Stokes. It was the first country place owned here by the former steel master. Previously he had spent his vacation at Skibo Castle, at Dunfermline, in Scotland. When he purchased the Lennox property it was announced that neither he nor any member of his family probably would ever again visit Skibo because of changes physical and sentimental, caused by the war.

CARNEGIE, ADVOCATE OF PEACE.

HAD HIT BY WORLD WAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Although Mr. Carnegie, who was in his 84th year, had been an invalid since 1917 when he suffered an attack of grippe, the news of his death was a shock to old friends and former business associates here. Since his previous serious illness, he had been under the care of two nurses.

Identified so long with the international peace movement, Mr. Carnegie was said to have been more severely affected by the world war than most men. It came as a hard blow to him and the cause which he had so close at heart.

Owing to his ill health, Mr. Carnegie for some time had led a secluded life and his withdrawal from all public activities gave rise to frequent statements concerning his health. After his retirement he was compelled to limit the number of his daily visitors and until his last illness he met and spoke with only a few of his oldest and closest friends.

PITTSBURG PAYS TRIBUTE

TO DEPARTING MAGNATE

PITTSBURG, Aug. 11.—This city, where Andrew Carnegie laid the foundation for his vast fortune in the steel business, today paid tribute to the dead magnate. Immediately after reading the Associated Press dispatch announcing Mr. Carnegie's death, Mayor E. V. Babcock ordered all flags in Pittsburgh lowered to half mast. At the Carnegie Institute, the scene of one of his philanthropic works, plans were made to drape the building with crepe. News of his sudden death spread rapidly. At the steel mills which bear his name preparations were made to suspend work and other institutions in which he was interested planned similar action.

IN CARNEGIE'S HOUGHTY

The Carnegie Free Library, which was built by Andrew Carnegie, probably will be draped in crepe, out of respect to the memory of the deceased philanthropist. Informed of Mr. Carnegie's death through The Courier, the librarian stated that the board of trustees likely would take action about it. It was not known then just what form the tribute would take.

Mr. Carnegie gave Trinity Lutheran and the First Methodist Episcopal churches their organs. The chimes of the Lutheran church were the gift of H. C. Frick.

DR. KALBFUS AND E. W. KELLY, GAME OFFICERS, DEAD IN AUTO CRASH

Well-Known State Officials Instantly Killed When Fast Train Hits Car.

WARREN, Pa., Aug. 11.—Struck at noon Sunday by an express train speeding at the rate of 60 miles an hour on the Pennsylvania railroad at Saybrook, near here, an automobile in which Joseph Kalbfus, secretary of the state game commission, and chief game protector of the state of Pennsylvania, and E. W. Kelly, field superintendent of the game commission, were riding was torn to pieces and both men were killed.

The two men, together with Dr. Charles B. Penrose, president of the commission, and John M. Phillips, a member of the commission, had been in Western Pennsylvania inspecting land offered as game refuge under a recent act of the Legislature, which has appropriated $100,000 for the purchase of lands west of the Allegheny mountains. Friday they spent at Uniontown and Saturday they were at DuBois, and Sunday they had planned to go over a tract located near Warren.

The party left DuBois Sunday morning, traveling in two automobiles. One containing Dr. Penrose of Philadelphia and Mr. Phillips of Pittsburgh, was leading. Mr. Kelly and Dr. Kalbfus were in a car at the rear. At Saybrook, which is in this county, about nine miles from Warren, there is a dangerous crossing on the tracks of the Renovo division.

BOOM IN PROSPECT FOR EAST FAYETTE
CO. AT OHIO PYLE

Development of Big Coal Holdings in That Section Likely in Near Future.

MINES WORKING DAILY

Enlargement of Tipples and Construction of Bins for Storage Mean Steady Time for Employees; New Equipment is to be Added, Also.

Receipt of orders by the East Fayette Coal company of Ohio Pyle sufficient to take care of its present output has put all its mines to working full time and prospects are good for big business in the future, according to company officials.

The East Fayette Coal company has its workings on the western bank of the Yough, just below Ohio Pyle. The coal is cut with Goodman short-wall machines and hauled to the surface with electric motors. An extension is being made to the present tipple and bins have been placed between tents to take care of the coal on days when there are no railroad cars to load.

This arrangement means no layoffs for the employees, but steady work. A larger locomotive is to be secured to convey coal on the tramroad.

The management intends to develop the mines with the idea of materially increasing the output in the near future.

The company has 2,000 acres of Lower Kittanning coal, known as the Miller seam in Somerset county, and 1,500 acres of Lower Freeport coal with an average thickness of five feet, which will be opened up at an early date.

Sufficient houses have been erected at the plant to take care of its employees. These are rented at the normal rate of $6 a month.

The East Fayette Coal company is composed largely of Scottish men. John P. Torrence of Connellsville is superintendent.

FAIR PRICE FIXING
EXPECTED TO BRING
PROFITEERS TO LIGHT

Committee Who Aided Food Administrators During War Will Be Reappointed.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The government campaign designed to reduce the high cost of living and to bring to book hoarders and profiteers was well under way today.

Congress began preliminary work on some of the legislation which the executive department regards as necessary to strengthen its hand and the hundreds of investigators of the Department of Justice moved to the aid of district attorneys, seeking evidence against profiteers. Attorney General Palmer expected the re-establishing of fair price committees by the state food administrators who worked with Administrator Hoover during the war to have a wholesome effect by the disclosing to the public concrete cases of profiteering by retailers.

The committees will be asked to publish "fair price" lists in all communities for the guidance of purchasers.

HUNTING POTATO WART

State Agent Knows of None Here But

Wants Any Promptly Reported.

L. E. Yocum of Washington, a representative of the pathology department of Pennsylvania State college, was in Connellsville today making a preliminary survey to determine if there exists in the county the recently discovered plant disease known as potato wart. Either Mr. Yocum or another will return in the course of a week or two to continue the investigation.

So far as is known none of the disease has been found here. It is prevalent in the anthracite coal region and has appeared mostly in gardens. The pest is in the form of a parasite which causes a wart that spreads rapidly and eventually infects the whole potato. Soil once contaminated remains so for years, the experts say. Any person finding the disease is asked to at once report it to the county farm agent in Uniontown or the plant pathologist at the experiment station at State college. The wart differs from scab in that it causes bumps on the tuber.

Service Men Guests at Picnic
Following Splendid Parade
Saturday Morning.

ABOUT 500 AT DINNER

Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Are Served in Big Tent; Others Open Baskets in the Grove; Pastors Make Addresses; Parade is Fine.

From 5,000 to 6,000 persons, according to estimates of officials, gathered at the Dawson driving park Saturday afternoon to participate in the formal celebration of the home-coming of the soldiers, sailors and marines and others in the service of the country during the war from the community which included Dawson, Vanderbilt, Dickerson Run, Liberty and Lower Tyrone township. How many were in the parade was not definitely estimated, but it is said 50 minutes were required for the procession to pass through the gates to the park. Taken as a whole it was a success beyond the most sanguine expectations of the men and women who arranged it.

Including service men and the bands and persons who came from a distance without baskets, between 500 and 600 persons were served first dinner in a big tent, under the direction of Frank A. Tarr, chairman of the committee on refreshments. The remainder lunched in picnic parties scattered throughout the park in the shade of the trees to the east of the race track.

Save for some athletic events, put on by the Spring Grove Sunday school, the afternoon's program consisted of speaking and band concerts by the Dickerson Run Y. M. C. A. and the Iron Bridge bands. The speeches were delivered in the grandstand, which was packed. Owing to the size of the structure and the noise not many heard what the speakers had to say.

Attorney M. M. Cochran, a resident of Uniontown but whose former home was in the Dawson community and whose heart is there, was the presiding officer, being succeeded when he found it necessary to leave, by Burgess L. S. Melinger. Rev. D. C. White, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Vanderbilt; Rev. W. B. Funnell, pastor of the Dawson Presbyterian church; Col. James J. Barhart, of Sunnyside, and Rev. H. A. Baum, pastor of the Cochran Memorial Methodist church, were the speakers.

Mr. Cochran took occasion, in his introductory, to give a brief history of the community.

Rev. White spoke on what the United States has done and spoke at some length on the labor situation in the nation.

The war is over but the fighting is yet to be done, declared Rev. Funnell in denouncing the Bolshevik element. He handled without gloves the radical agitator.

OVER 5,000 PERSONS ATTEND COMMUNITY HOME-COMING

Colonel Barnhart lauded the boys who went out to fight for the country in a brief but eloquent talk. The achievements of the American Army and Navy formed the theme of the address of Rev. Baum who recounted the work of the nation in raising, equipping and transporting an army of 2,000,000 to France and its splendid record after it reached the front. He related many anecdotes of the soldier life. Concluding he extended a most cordial welcome to the service men in behalf of the community.

Burgess Melling made a few remarks at the close of Rev. Baum's address, inviting attention also to the memorial service Sunday.

Better weather for a celebration could not have been desired. The result was the attendance of a crowd of the size not often witnessed on a picnic occasion.

Fathers and mothers of the boys were well represented in the big gathering. About 150 mothers and 100 fathers were in the parade from Vanderbilt to the park. Each wore a badge with the word "Father" or "Mother."

The Red Cross women of the community are proud of the showing they made. A feature of their part of the parade was the Red Cross float with Mrs. P. J. Cunningham in the role of the "Greatest Mother in the World" and a half dozen girls as Red Cross nurses. About 200 women of Dawson and Vanderbilt unity of the Red Cross were in the parade. The Junior Red Cross from St. James school in Lower Tyrone township made a fine showing.

Four commissioned officers marched at the head of the military division of the parade. In command was Captain J. H. Hazlett of Vanderbilt, the ranking officer of the community. With him were Captain W. J. German of the 15th Engineers, who is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Strawn of Dawson, Lieutenant E. A. Glennon and Lieutenant Melvin Fuller.

The representation of the Tyrone grange is worthy of mention. The farmer folks cast aside work for the day and turned out in large numbers.

Joining with the veterans of the Civil War of the community in helping honor their younger comrades were several from Connelleville. About 40 turned out, the official count said.

In addition the uniform rank of the Knights of Malta and Juniors, members of the Red Men marched in the parade.

After the speaking and band concerts, which lasted until after 3 o'clock, the crowds began to slowly leave the park, though some lingered until late in the evening.

Congratulations over the success of the celebration were showered on General Chairman L. S. Melling and his associates. Many pronounced it the finest they had ever seen and one said it was worthy of a city of 10,000 to 15,000.

OVER 500 GUESTS AT SOLDIER DINNER AT DAWSON PARK

In Addition Service Men's Committee Takes Care of Many Who Come Without Baskets.

If any went hungry among the soldier guests at the Dawson community celebration Saturday it was not because ample provisions had not been made for them by the refreshment committee under the direction of Chairman Frank A. Tarr. The general chairman not only took care of the service men and the musicians, for whom the dinner was especially prepared, but hundreds who came from outside the community without baskets.

Fried chicken, mashed potatoes, string beans, corn on the cob, chicken gravy, bread, butter, ice cream and cake made up the menu. Not only was it substantial but the supply was abundant.

In the preparation and serving of the dinner Mr. Tarr was ably assisted by Red Cross girls headed by Miss Nellie Welsh. These young women were on the job the day before the celebration and worked as if the whole celebration depended on just how much energy they put into it. Besides Mrs. Welsh there were Clara Colbert, Catherine Rathburn, Mrs. Cora Hutchinson, Mrs. Mary Stuckert, Mrs. J. W. dead in the World War from the Dawson community were conducted yesterday afternoon at the Presbyterian church at Vanderbilt with Rev. Jesse Porter, pastor of the Christian church and Rev. E. A. Glennon of Sacred Heart church, Dawson as the chief speakers. Owing to the fine weather the service was held on the church lawn, seats being provided for all who cared for them. A large audience heard the addresses. Singers from the several churches of the community made up the choir which sang special numbers.

The European situation during the days when the war was going against the Allies, the ravages of the Germans in Belgium and France and the possible fate of America had not England and France stood between the enemy and America were pictured in the address of Rev. Porter. The speaker paid tribute to Lieutenant H. D. Shallenberger, Jr., a Vanderbilt officer who was killed in battle and others of the community who gave up their lives in the service. The occasion of the memorial, the speaker said, marked the anniversary of Emory L. Patt, another Vanderbilt soldier.

In his address Father Glennon dwelt on the immortal life of the soldier and asked those whose kin made the supreme sacrifice to find consolation in the thought that "they are living still and in the midst of grief we know that they are immortal." None of the soldiers was known to have rejected Christianity, the speaker said.

Rev. D. C. White, pastor of the Presbyterian church presided over the services. He referred to the theory at the beginning of the war that possibly 80 per cent of those who went to France might not return while figures have shown that only four per cent paid the supreme price. The pastor paid a tribute to Lieutenant Shallenberger.

Rev. H. A. Baum of the Cochran Memorial church at Dawson, made the invocation. Rev. M. H. Hackman, pastor of the Methodist church at Vanderbilt offered prayer and Rev. Snyder, a local Baptist preacher, pronounced the benediction.

The Grim Reaper

GLADYS P. NILAND.

While visiting at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Frank Kosner, in Cumberland, Miss Gladys P. Niland, 17 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Niland of 404 Highland avenue, was taken suddenly ill and died yesterday afternoon at the Allegheny hospital, Cumberland. Miss Niland left home two weeks ago for Washington, D. C., to visit her aunt, Mrs. Mary C. Frye, and it is believed she caught her ague on the way. She arrived in Cumberland last Wednesday and on Friday evening was taken ill with meningitis. She was removed to the hospital Sunday morning at 11 o'clock for treatment. Following the removal of pus from the spine she sank into an unconscious condition and died in that state at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. About a year and a half ago she suffered from spinal trouble, Miss Niland's sudden death came as a great shock to her wide circle of friends. The body arrived here this morning on Baltimore & Ohio train No. 9 and was removed by funeral director Charles C. Mitchell to the family home. Miss Niland was born in Connelleville and spent all her life here. She was graduated from the parochial schools in 1916 and would have graduated from the local high school next year. She was very popular among her schoolmates, as well as her many other friends. In addition to her parents, three brothers, Joseph, William P., who saw service in France, and Edward and Mrs. Mary Niland, all at home, survive. Funeral from the family residence at 8:30 o'clock and at 2 o'clock requiem high mass will be celebrated at the Immaculate Conception church, of which Miss Niland was a member. She was also a member of the Young Ladies Society. The interment will be made in St. Joseph's cemetery.

MRS. ELIZA ANN DINSMORE.
Mrs. Eliza Ann Gibbs Dinsmore, 82 years old, widow of William Dinsmore, died Sunday evening at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ellen Morrison in Main street, Mount Pleasant. Mrs. Dinsmore suffered a stroke of paralysis last April and never recovered from the effects. The deceased was very well known in Connelleville, having resided here for many years. Since the death of her husband, which occurred a number of years ago, at the Dinsmore home in Crawford avenue, West Side, Mrs. Dinsmore had made her home with her sister, Mrs. Morrison. In addition to one sister, a son Harry Dinsmore of Connelleville, survives.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 8 o'clock from the Morrison residence, with Rev. T. C. Harper of the United Brethren church of Mount Pleasant officiating. The body will be brought to Connelleville Wednesday morning and interred in Hill Grove cemetery.

William Atwood, 21 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Wood of Brownsville, was instantly killed Saturday afternoon at Allison cove siding, when he was crushed between the lungs and heart while coupling earle had been employed by the Monongahela railroad for the past six years.

HAROLD McLAUGHLIN.
Harold Lee McLaughlin, six months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. William McLaughlin, Jr., of Youngstown, Pa., died Saturday. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, with Rev. D. E. Miner, of Dunbar, officiating. Interment in Park Place cemetery, Uniontown.

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well. My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Sometimes there are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal. If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years' experience is at your service.

ILLNESS UPSET HIS NERVES AND MADE ARM NUMB

H. L. Martin Tells How Nervous
Mind What Doctors
Couldn't Do

This was a serious case. It looked very bad for that arm. But that was before Mr. Martin banked on the power of Nerv North afterwards—but let Mr. Martin tell the story as he did a short time ago to his Zanesville,
Ohio, druggist.

Zanesville Drug Store—I met with an accident some time ago which left me in a very nervous condition all over. I tried different doctors and couldn't get no relief. They all said I would probably be troubled all my life.

I read where Nerv North had been helping so many people and decided to try it. The first bottle made me feel better and after taking three bottles THE NERVOUSNESS WAS ALL GONE from my arm and I felt as good as I ever did. I sure recommend Nerv North to anyone suffering from nervous troubles.

Market Bureau Says Late Crops Have Been Injured

HARRISBURG Aug 11—(Special)
—The Bureau of Markets of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture today issued the following forecast regarding the supplies of meat by fruit and vegetable crops for the present working season. The forecast is that the supply of products so far this season will be the best use of the products for the late crops have been somewhat injured by the heavy rains that prevalence, particularly in the southeast part of the state.

Lima beans are coming in in large quantities now, and here a good supply will be some with the corn available and put a few jars of succotash or the part of itself. Some new corn is coming in. This added to the large variety of products already available affords a wide choice of material for all parts of the menu.
Huckleberries and blackberries continue in good supply but they soon will be on the wane. Champion Mountain Rose and Carman peaches are the most common white varieties now being marketed. These together with a few early pears and the large quantities of plums available will enable housewives to do some preserving.

TIME TO TALK SENSIBLY OR KEEP QUIET.

It is noteworthy that thus far the discussions of the demands of the railroad employees have made for increased wages and public ownership of the railroads the comments of public men and the press have been temperate, with reasonableness and fairness and without intent to arouse prejudice or excite passion. It is realized almost everywhere, and by almost every person, that the situation which has been created is a serious one and that all considered by temperate speech is as much of place among the opponents as it is among the supporters of the proposed measures.

Thoughtful men are willing to concede that there are two sides to the question and that a safe solution cannot be reached without a sane and sensible consideration of the great issues involved. Unfortunately, however, a member of the Senate and a member of the House, who by virtue of their office should give the country a better example in moderation in thought and expression, have had the indiscretion to indulge in impassioned addresses in which statements and declarations were made that will not tend to promote the kind of feeling by which the parties to a discussion of the questions should be animated. In an address before the Senate a few days ago Senator Thomas, Democrat, from Colorado, delivered himself after this fashion when speaking of the demands of the railroad men:

"I cannot justify it as anything short of treason. We are here to face with the demand for wage increases costing $300,000,000, which confessedly will not help them, or they will suspend our great transportation system."

Their second demand is for confiscation of $25,000,000,000 of property, that it be put into government ownership. This is the first time in the history of the American nation, and God grant it be the last, in which a segment of the American people has pointed its finger at Congress saying, "must legislate thus and so, or we will strike and tie up all transportation and industry."

"Ours is the responsibility now to give answer. There is no consequence so serious as involved in yielding. It means an end to representative government. Let's not flinch the issue. It's quite as important as any treaty. It's a threat to bring ruin on the country."

Subsequently Congressman Blanton, Democrat, from Texas, regaled the House with an equally immoderate speech preparatory to the introduction of a resolution which declares that "a state of anarchy" exists in the United States and calls upon the President to take drastic action "to adequately protect citizens in their property rights."

Whatever may be the views upon the questions before the public nothing will be gained, but much may be lost in the direction of a settlement of them, by the indulgence in this sort of demagoguery. The railroad employees are loyal Americans as their several crafts so abundantly proved during the war, both on the overseas front and on the home front. Their plan of public ownership may violate many of the well established and fundamental laws of economics and they may have a mistaken idea of its practicability and usefulness, and they may be somewhat over zealous in urging its adoption, but the part of all good citizens is to convince them of their errors by reasoning and sound argument, not to foment strife, invite resentment or excite radical action.

It is a time even for Democratic agitators—falsely so-called—to keep quiet if they cannot talk and act sensibly.

THE DAWSON WAY.

To those persons who are familiar with what the people of the Dawson-Vanderbilt-Dickerson Run community did during the war, and felt a touch of the spirit by which they were animated, will agree that Rev. Father Glenon's tribute, published in Saturday's Courier, is as deserving as it was gracefully bestowed.

As he so aptly serves this community "went ahead and did things, never giving a thought as to statistics, cost and credit for so doing." Not boastfully, but with a desire to merely do their full duty did the people go forward from day to day as new opportunities for service presented themselves.

The war work they did in such a splendid way was brought to a fitting and appropriate close by the honors paid the service men, living and dead, by the community's home-coming celebration on Saturday, but it will not mark the end of cooperative effort to promote every undertaking and activity designed to advance the progress, material well-being and happiness of the people.

While "Dawson's enterprise and service in the war" were gigantic, both will be as energetically directed to the equally important tasks and problems of peace. That is the Dawson even more pretentious but less wide-awake and less loyal communities can profitably follow.

DOWN IN OLD KENTUCKY.

A straw in the political wind has that a straw in the political wind has given direction by the election of the Republican candidate in Congress in the Eighth district of Kentucky this week over his Democratic opponent by a majority of 1,500.

The circumstances surrounding this special election are interesting from whatever angle they may be viewed. In the first place the incumbent whose death caused the vacancy was a Democrat and had been elected and re-elected for many years by majorities that averaged about 3,000 votes, notwithstanding vigorous contests against him by strong Republican candidates. The district is normally Democratic by about the same figures. The campaign just waged, in which the Republican was elected, was devoid of personalities. Each of the nominees agreed to make his fight on strictly party lines. The Democrat camp out for everything President Wilson advocates or has supported, including hearty endorsement of the proposed League of Nations and the peace treaty. The Republican candidate made no attacks on his Democratic opponent or his policies, but confined his efforts to setting himself before the voters as an ardent advocate of everything for which the Republican party stands. It was tacitly admitted on both sides that this should be a test of strength on National issues, the Republican starting away with a handicap of about 3,000 votes.

The result, a sweeping Republican victory, can be viewed in no other light than that many Democrats throughout the country view with concern and doubt, if not actual disapproval, the attitude of the Democratic administration at Washington, and it should give President Wilson pause for thought providing he has any regard for his party's prospects at the next national election. The verdict of the voters in this instance is strongly in favor of Republican policies and confirms the belief engendered by last fall's Republican victories in the Congressional elections that the country is heartily tired of Democratic mismanagement and desirous of giving the Republicans an opportunity to place the combination of Socialism and autocracy at present in control of the executive branch of the government forever on the shelf at Washington. This entails a responsibility on the Republican leadership as weighty as it is gratifying to the loyal ranks and file of the party. The American people expect great things of the Republican party. They must not be disappointed.

In the hunt for food profiteers to have the same kind of a brass band accompaniment that goes with the periodic stock-in-trade political run up of the most packers?

How, some curious folks are disposed to ask, did those Pinnacle residents have such certain knowledge of the character of the goods which a well known citizen was caught in the act of purloining from his own cellar? And, it is further inquired, why did these selfsame residents act so valiantly in attempting to prevent the removal of the precious stuff from their midst?

The grade crossing has all classes of citizens for its victims.

If the habit of making the sidewalk the place of deposit for chewing gum which has lost its savor is continued with due diligence, we will eventually be provided with non-skid pathways to and from our places of employment and business.

Pinnacle residents had evidently made the discovery that one of the six best cellars was located in that section. Was it price or self interest that prompted them to demand retention of this distinction?

The Dilemmas of President Wilson

By Robert T. Small, Philadelphia
Lecturer.

Probably no President of the United States ever found himself confronting at one time such a series of dilemmas as our present President, Woodrow Wilson today. The twin tempests of economic unrest and political discord which have been sweeping Washington in great fury for more than a week past have centered at last about his head. The President faces not a single crisis, but a succession of crises, each one heavily laden with the possibilities of serious trouble.

Mr. Wilson undertook to ignore domestic problems after the signing of the armistice, and for the next eight months gave all of his thought and all of his time to finding what he considered a satisfactory solution of the badly scrambled affairs of Europe. Returning to America a month ago, the President admitted he had been completely out of touch with home questions, and indicated by word and by a proposed transcontinental speaking tour that he would continue to devote himself for some time to come to the sole aim of bringing about in the Senate a fruition of his work in the secret council chambers of Paris.

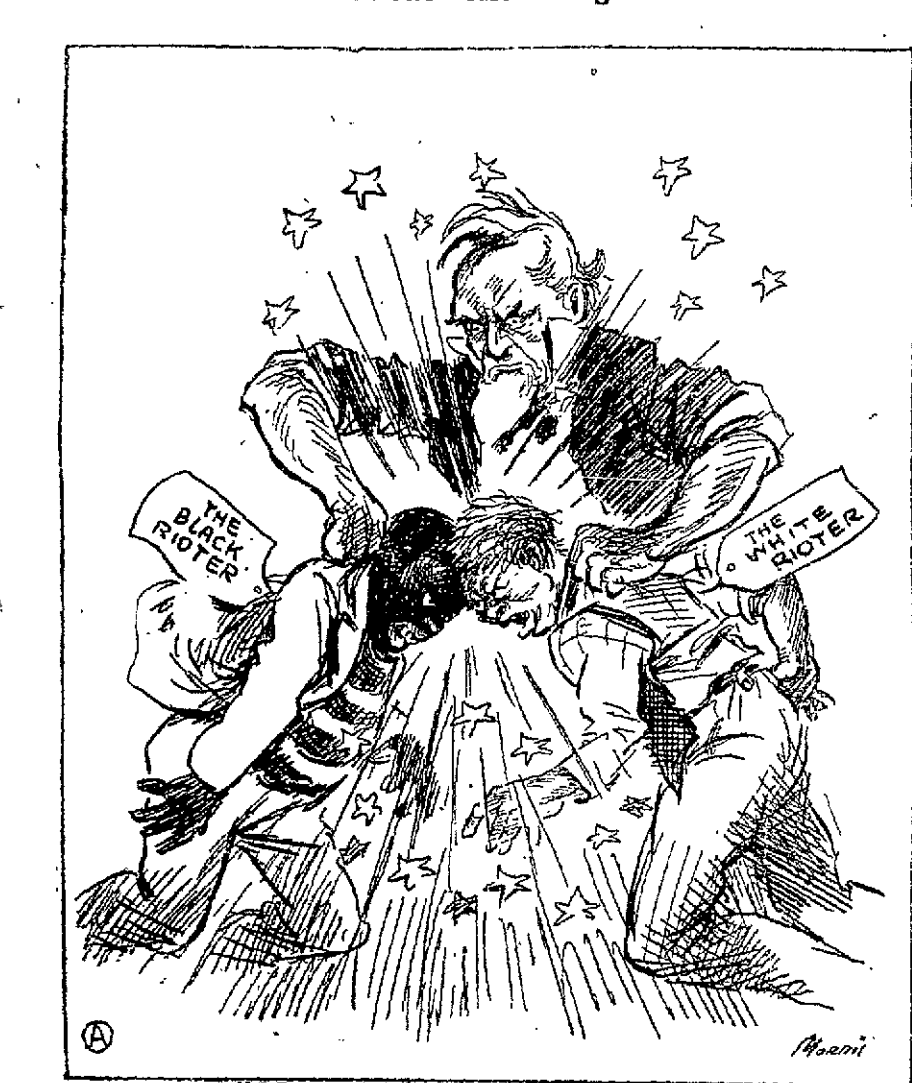

But now the storm of domestic problems has broken over the White House with a dangerous display of lightning and an alarming crash of thunder, while the international situation has shown no indication whatever of clearing weather.

First of all the President finds the entire people of the United States clanking at the White House gates in demand that something be done at once to stay the ruthless hand of the food profiteer and to bring down the high cost of living.

Secondly, the President found that Congress had turned squarely upon him and his railroad administration responsibility for meeting the immediate demands of the railway unions for increased wages and averting a threatened nation-wide strike.

Thirdly, the President will find that soon he must take sides for or to "nationalize" the railroads as the first step toward a nationalization, or socialization, of all quasi-public utilities and basic industries. Democrats in Congress generally are opposed to the plan, but they are likely to keep rather quiet until the President indicates where he stands. The labor leaders assert their plan, merely carries into effect some of Mr. Wilson's expressed ideals for democracy and the working man.

Treat 'em Rough

In the fourth place the President finds himself confronted with a crisis in his fight for the ratification of the treaty of peace and the acceptance of the league of nations without modification or change of any character. The situation in the Senate is getting away from the administration spokesmen again. It is freely predicted in Washington that unless the President brings himself to a frame of mind to accept in the very near future a series of satisfactory reservations, the treaty may eventually fail of ratification.

In the fifth place, the President is in sharp conflict with his secretary of state, Mr. Lansing, as to the Shantung arrangement effected in Paris. The placing of entire responsibility on President Wilson for the Shantung decision by Mr. Lansing and the secretary's further testimony indicating that Mr. Wilson was virtually the entire American delegation in himself have tended to stiffen the opposition to the treaty and to make the course of his friends the harder.

In addition to all these worries the President finds all of Europe looking at him and anxiously awaiting for him to make good some of his aims and promises in Paris. The French are particularly scrutinizing his course with respect to the special alliance, or defensive treaty, which he signed at Versailles promising the immediate aid of this country in the event of an unprovoked attack by Germany.

Lastly, it is generally understood the President's trip to the Pacific coast has been definitely abandoned. Later in the fall, if tranquility should come to the perturbed people of the country, the President may make the proposed journey, which he had intended should be an accounting to the people of his stewardship of American interests at the Peace Conference.

But with strikes impending, with open declarations of industrial war and predictions of revolution by the representatives of organized labor, President Wilson finds he will have to remain in Washington for some time to come.

AUGUST.

It's August and it seems to me
The world's a hive of industry.
There's nothing but is working now
At topmost speed, as though somehow
It had a task that it must do
And really had to hurry through.
If we had cars attuned just right
We'd hear the overhauled day and night
Molding their fruits to proper size
And if we had observing eyes
I fancy we could stand and see
The working methods of a tree.

All nature now is in a push
To beat the apple with its blush
And glad with wondrous gold the grain
Before shall come September's rain.
The soil is burning at our feet
With foods for mortal man to eat
And each must finished be before
The killing frosts return once more!
Oh these are nature's busy days,
She's working in a thousand ways
And doing everything she can
To satisfy the needs of man.

She has no time that she may waste,
Today she toils with feverish haste
The frosts of winter come again,
On every hand, could we but see,
We should behold each plant and tree
Completing now with purpose true
The task it has been given to do
Now nature toils in every field
And soon the vineyard's humblest
And

Stiffing Missouri Industries.

Morley, Mo., Banner.
A rather prolific crop of black-berries is reported in this section which will sell for 30 cents a gallon. But it looks as if most of the crop was doomed to go to waste since all able and proficient berry pickers simply refuse to venture out with their stock of snake bite remedies exhausted and no way to replenish it. It is now predicted, also, that farmers living along water courses will have to resort to the use of dynamite to keep the fish from overrunning their farms since fishing has about lost all its popularity.

of early autumn raiment for women, misses and children. We want you to inspect the distinctive styles that are coming in to our stores daily from the eastern markets. Our purchases for autumn are completed, and while you hear a general complaint of scarcity of goods of staple, popular kinds, you will not see much evidence of it in our stores. We have been very fortunate in securing medium stocks of most of the popular autumn styles. What we are going to do when they are closed out is a question. We merely give you this information, and take this occasion to advise that you buy early. It is going to be a season of the "early bird catching the worm." It would take too much space to specify the different kinds of materials we have for women's, misses' and children's autumn clothing. A visit to our stores, an inspection, would be more satisfactory to you and to us.

Your attention is also called to our stock of early autumn shoes for women, misses, and children. Goods that we purchased several months ago are now coming in. There is no noticeable change in styles—we are offering the finest colored high tops with all the different styles of vamps and shapes. There is a very complete line of good strong sensible school shoes for misses and girls. There is just about what you want in every line, and you will find the prices very reasonable.

NEWS OF THE DAY AT MT. PLEASANT BRIEFLY RELATED

Ernest Ruder, Former Proprietor of the Ruder Inn, Dies in New York.

DRUNK HAS A POOR MEMORY

Man Gathered in By the Police on Saturday Night Forgets Where He Got His Liquor and is Fined $15; Greensburg Answers Alarm.

Special to The Courier.
MOUNT PLEASANT, Aug. 11.—The Mount Pleasant Protected Home Circle, which held its annual picnic at Oakford park on Wednesday, the 23rd, has rented the dancing pavilion from 2 until 8 o'clock and will take Gamble's orchestra from here with them to furnish the music. The cars will leave the main street switch on the hill at 8 o'clock.

Ernest Ruder Dies.
Ernest Ruder, aged 63 years, formerly proprietor of the Ruder Inn at this place, died in a New York hospital on Saturday. The Ruder Inn furnishings were recently sold and Mrs. Ruder had gone to Schenectady, N. Y., to visit her son, William, Oscar, an older son, lives on Smithfield street, this place. Mr. Ruder was proprietor of the Ruder Inn for 12 years. The body will be taken to Roscoe, Pa., tomorrow where interment will be made.

Corn Roast.
Mr. and Mrs. William Shupe and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Patterson and families motored to Wellytown to the home of Ora Gibbons where a corn roast was held on Friday evening. Hot waffles, corn, buns, cake and pie were served. Music was furnished by the Wellytown quartette.

Drunk Has Bad Memory.
A common drunk was gathered in on Saturday evening and having a bad memory as to where he had received the booze was fined $15 by Burgess S. P. Stevens at police court on Sunday at noon.

Greensburg Responds.
A mistake in alarm, a Mount Pleasant street alarm being mistaken for a Mount Pleasant alarm, caused Greensburg to respond to the town with three fire trucks. One was stopped at the corner of College avenue, one at Diamond street and the third just as it was entering town. Mount Pleasant feels thankful to Greensburg for its quick response when it thought Mount Pleasant was in need of their help.

Miss Grace Brown, daughter of John Brown of North Church street, has just returned from State College where she has completed her course of study at the summer school. ## WESTMORELAND GROCERY DENIES HOLDING SUGAR

Rumor That Several Cars Are on Hand, Repudiated by Manager F. E. Koelker.

Notices to the retail grocers and public:

During the past week some party or parties have circulated the report that the Westmoreland Grocery company has two or three cars of sugar in their warehouse which they will not sell to the merchants of Connellsville and surrounding towns but are holding it for higher prices.

The report is a fabrication from start to finish and can serve no good purpose as it only tends to promote a spirit of unrest among all classes. We want to assure our many friends that if we had the sugar referred to we would be only too willing and glad to let them have it as any person who has been reading the papers, can readily realize how foolish any jobber would be to hoard anything for higher prices; aside from this it is against our set policy to do so. Since June 21st to date we should have had at least 10 cars of sugar whereas we only received 3 cars, one on July 25th and the other on July 28th. These two cars with the exception of possibly 1,000 or 2,000 pounds which we always hold back in times of a shortage for some customers who are located in out of the way places, were distributed among our retail customers immediately on arrival without waiting for a grocery order as was demanded by some out of town jobbers, nor did we charge from five cents to $1.00 per hundred pounds extra due to the sugar shortage as was also done by our out of town competitors. These facts alone clearly show that we should not be classed as profiteers. Our aim at all times is to treat our trade fairly thereby retaining the confidence they have placed in us.

The sugar shortage was brought about in the first place by Great Britain purchasing large quantities of raw sugar with the understanding between them and our government that our refiners would do the refining for them and while our refiners were working on this sugar they were consequently unable to fill domestic orders, however, this alone would not have caused so much shortage but about the time the government issued orders to stop exporting sugar to Europe the marine workers at some of the ports of entry for raw sugar went on strike for higher wages which only aggravated a tense situation.

The entire matter has been beyond the control of any jobber all of whom are just as much disappointed at their failure to get sugar as the retailer and consumer. We have written and telegraphed repeatedly but the refiners advise us they're doing the best they can under very trying conditions.

In view of the above we feel that our many friends will not be misled by the talk of the Bohemian agitators whose only aim in life is to cause unrest and dissension among their fellow men. In the meantime we will continue to do all in our power to relieve a distressing situation.

Respectfully, Westmoreland Grocery company, F. Edward Koelker, manager—Ad.

Y. M. C. A. CANTEN LOOTED DURING THE STRIKES IN ITALY

"Camera Del Lavoro" No Respecter of Property of Other Nations.

FLORENCE, Italy, July 14.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) That the "Camera Del Lavoro," as the management of the recent Italian strikes styles itself, is no respecter of the property of other nations was emphasized when the canten of the American Young Men's Christian Association serving almost exclusively the enlisted men of the Italian army, was commandeered and ransacked.

The canten was under the direction of Harry H. Holbert, of Tucson, Ariz., who told the Associated Press correspondent: "I am sure that it was not the soldiers who did the work. The soldiers were extremely grateful to us for the work we have been doing. We had been providing them with many of the things they needed at greatly reduced prices. The delegates of the 'Camera Del Lavoro' vainly tried to influence the soldiers, themselves, to destroy the place."

"Failing to influence the soldiers, the delegates took the matter in their own hands and drove up one morning in a large motor truck demanding admission and ordering the loading of all the supplies in the canten. We lost more than $500 worth of supplies by the incident."

FAMOUS JOCKEY CLUB IN MEXICO CITY NOW AMERICAN DRUG STORE

Unique Structure Preserves With Conversion of "House of Tiles" Into Business Place.

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The conversion of the "House of Tiles" into a typical American drug store marks the passing of one of the palatial and unique structures ever erected in this city of interesting buildings. Many persons in the United States remember the house as the Jockey Club, the most exclusive and aristocratic place of its kind in the republic, but for the past few years it has stood on a prominent downtown corner, a black, decrepit structure, whose shiny and gaudy exterior of tile gave evidence of its former glory. Some time in August it will open for business as a drug store.

The date when the building's foundations were laid is lost in obscurity, but it is thought that it was started about 1850. Later it came into the possession of Don Luis de Rivera, a man of varied career, who was responsible for its exterior coat of tiles. These latter are of blue, yellow and white, Moorish in design, and were made by artisans brought from Talavera, Spain, by the Dominican friars in the sixteenth century. They were modeled in a special ceramic factory at Puebla, about seventy-five miles distant, and the completion of this decoration was the occasion for a public celebration.

The family of Don Luis de Rivera, who later became the Count of Orizaba, remained in possession of the house until the time of the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian. His last descendant was a sister of the then Count of Orizaba, upon whom the emperor conferred the title of Marquessa de Curia.

Later the structure was taken over by the Jockey Club and converted into a sumptuous club house. Stories of fabulous sums won and lost at its gaming tables persist to this day. Stirring revolutionary times caused its abandonment and for several years the building was vacant until the present lessees secured it for a period of twenty years.

Indicative, perhaps, of an intention by the government to restore it later is the fact that, before renovation started, photographs were taken of all interesting portions of the building, including the huge carved door.

JURYMEN SAY DELAY IN TRIAL WILL NOT SAVE COCCHI'S LIFE

Italian Arraigned in Italy For Murder of Ruth Cruger Implicates Wife.

BOLOGNA, Italy, July 15.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) Jurymen who sat in the last session of the court which has been trying Alfredo Cocchi for the murder of Ruth Cruger in New York City have told the Associated Press correspondent that they saw little hope for Cocchi in his dramatic tale in which he accused his own wife of killing the New York girl and admitted he mutilated Miss Cruger's body to protect his wife.

The jurors said Cocchi's story had robbed him of any pity the jury might otherwise have.

"He gained nothing by his dramatic presentation in the court of the affair," said one jurymen. "The very description of the incidents were enough to accuse him disregarding any of the motives that he might have had. His tale was certainly well prepared for him. Of course, it is certainly his plan to have his trial postponed again and again so that he will be entitled to receive his friends and his meals in prison instead of suffering solitary confinement."

Cocchi's counsel has obtained another delay in the trial. According to Italian criminal procedure, any convicted man would have deducted from his sentence all the time he served in prison prior to his trial so that all the time Cocchi delays the sentence will be much time saved from hard labor and solitary confinement if he is convicted.

"Cocchi knows that he is a doomed man. That is why he is playing for delay," said one juror to The Associated Press correspondent President Judge Bagnoli, who, according to Italian practice, conducts the cross-examination, there being no private prosecutor present, stated he would use all his powers to bring all the evidence before the jury, requesting, if necessary, witnesses from America.

AMERICA'S DEAD TO REMAIN IN FRANCE

BILL PENDING TO APPROPRIATE $500,000 TO ESTABLISH A NATIONAL CEMETERY.

CAPT. DANIELS' FINE PLAN

Former Landscape Engineer of National Parks Suggests That American Trees and Wild Flowers Be Transplanted to Resting Place of Heroes.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—Senator Spencer of Missouri has introduced a bill to appropriate $500,000 to establish in France an American national cemetery in which shall be buried the fallen soldiers of the American expeditionary forces. The measure already has passed the senate and is now pending in the house.

In the bill is a provision for the appointment of three senators and three representatives to plan and carry out the terms of the measure. It is not taken for granted by the friends of the project that these members of congress actually will select the place for the national cemetery nor undertake to plan its arrangement.

It has been suggested that the only thing to do is to send to France some American expert who combines engineering ability with a sense of landscape beauty in order that the cemetery shall be entirely worthy of the purpose to which it is to be dedicated.

As time goes on it becomes increasingly evident that the bodies of the majority of our dead in France will remain there, in the soil on which they gave up their lives for the cause of liberty. It was believed at the outset that the United States government would bring back to this country the remains of all its heroes. This thought was based on the evident desire of most of the families of the dead that such a course should be pursued. A change has come over the situation and recently there have been strong intimations that American fathers and mothers and sisters and brothers feel it is more fitting that their dead shall continue to rest where they made the heroic sacrifice.

Roosevelt Led the Way.

Undoubtedly the example set by former President and Mrs. Roosevelt in the case of their son Quentin, had much to do with the change of American opinion upon this subject. Colonel Roosevelt, before he died, joined with his wife in a statement that he thought it highly fitting that his son who went to his death in battle should rest in the place of his endowment. Immediately following this expression of sentiment in the case there was a marked falling off in the requests from Americans that the bodies of their dead should be brought back to the United States. In many letters which were received at that time, the Roosevelt sentiment was echoed.

An appealing plan has been suggested for the great American cemetery in France, and already it has been proposed to members of congress from various sections of the country, and all of them have given it approval. The suggestion comes from Capt. Mark Daniels of the engineer corps, who, by profession is a landscape engineer. Captain Daniels was the landscape engineer of the Yosemite national park, and general superintendent and landscape engineer of the United States national parks in 1914-15.

Beautiful Idea of Capt. Daniels.

It is believed by this army officer that a study should be made of the various sections of the embattled parts of France, and that some place beside a river where the soil is responsive should be chosen for the American national cemetery. The thought which has appeared most strongly to members of congress, and to others who know of it, is that there should be planted in the cemetery trees from every state in the Union, and that American wild flowers should be transplanted to blossom on and among the graves of the valiant.

If this plan were to be carried out, the dead of all the states would lie, as one might say, in home surroundings. It is possible to grow in France many of the trees which find root and life in the various states of the Union. The willows, the maples, the pines, the magnolias, the sequoias, and scores of other American trees will find the soil of France hospitable.

The subject has been studied already and it is known that so far as the tree and the wild flower grows are concerned, it is entirely feasible. The sentiment which attaches to the plan is strong.

In France in 1917 and again in 1918, I gathered on the battlefields wild flowers which I could not tell from those of the same general species which grow in the United States. The red clover was slightly different, but in the daisies and the buttercups I could distinguish few variations. Trees of the same families, but perhaps of not exactly the same species as those which grow in the United States, are abundant in France. The white birches, the oaks, and other trees with which Americans are familiar, grow there strong and beautiful. All these trees are closely akin to the American species, and with the soil of France hospitable as it is, tree men say that our own growths will take kindly to the new environment.

MAORIS BACK FROM WAR, HAVE TRIBAL MEMORIAL

Battalion Maintained at Full Strength Entirely by Voluntary Enlistment.

The battalion of Maoris, New Zealand aborigines, who fought in the Gallipoli campaign and afterward in France, has been welcomed home with a great feast, hokas (war dances) and tangi, or lament for those who fell in battle.

The acting prime minister, Sir James Allen, told them: "You Maoris held a proud position. You have not one conscript." From the time of its formation early in the war the Maori battalion was maintained at a strength of 1,200 entirely by voluntary enlistment.

Great quantities of mutton, beef, pork and other food had been baked in earthen ovens for the occasion. About 2,000 Maoris in all shaved in this feast. There were several poi (a native delicacy) dances.

The tangi was a scene of much emotion. The soldiers sat by tribes encircled by sorrowing natives. Led by their chiefs, the mourners grieved with low, wailing chants for those of their race who will never return. All the treasured heirlooms of the tribes had been brought from the safekeeping for the welcome. There were jade ornaments, mats, chief's head-dresses and beautiful kiltis. The chiefs of the various tribes, in their speeches employed the Maori South Sea language, after which there was a haka by the famous Arawa tribe and the speech of welcome by Sir James Allen.

BISHOP PITIES BEGGAR

The above possesses doors, and the bishop has given the keys to the beggar.

The bishop's act, telegraphed to a London correspondent, has caused much commotion and interest in the neighborhood.

SHARK SKIN "POKE"

Man Who Was to Go in Search of Gold Made It.

Whiling away a few dull moments at San Francisco before the departure of the old schooner Casco on a cruise for gold in the frozen North, Dan Lofdahl, one of the chosen sailor-masters on board, caught a four-foot shark in fishing over the side.

Lofdahl was occupied nearly all day in skinning the fish. His tastes wondered of what use the skin could be, and were told by the fishermen that it was to hold all the yellow dust they expected to find in Siberia. Every real miner has to have his "poke," or purse. The striped skin is to hang in the cabin in which Robert Louis Stevenson dreamed so many of the romances that have made him beloved wherever good books are read. The Casco is lying at the bulkhead between piers No. 42 and 44.

Bear Tries to Break In.

Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Baker, who live on Desolation, near Okin, Ore., had a thrilling experience one night recently when a bear attempted to break into their house. During the night Mr. and Mrs. Baker were awakened by a noise on the back porch, the noise being of something tearing at a window screen. Arising and investigating, the man of the house discovered a bear in the act of trying to gain entrance to the kitchen. Mr. Baker took a shot at the bear, but failed to kill him though he wounded the animal.

Boy Fells Robbers.

Eight Chinese robbers attacked Sing Hop, a wealthy Chinese shirt manufacturer, in his factory in San Francisco and demanded $2,000. When he refused they beat and tortured him until he agreed to give them all the money he had with him.

While this was going on his twelve-year-old son, Sing Fo, slipped out of the place and summoned Policeman John Floyd, who, with Detective Sergeant James Skelly and members of the Chinatown squad, broke into the place and caught the robbers as their victim was handing them $235.

Her New Hat.

Old Brother—Now that strikes me as a silly hat. Why, you can't see where you're going and it doesn't shade the back of your head.

Young Sister—Never mind my head or where I'm going. The purpose of a woman's hat is to make men look under it.—Sidney Bulletin.

EASY TIRE CHANGES

Inventive Genius Overcomes Difficulties in Use of Pneumatics.

Ingenuity has triumphed again in the automobile world. This time it is not the comfortable pleasure car but the bulky, hard-to-load truck that takes upon itself the benefit of a simple but big idea.

For several months now men in the trucking world who desire more speed or more protection for their goods have wanted to let pneumatic cord tires—the giants that appeared a short time ago—shoulder the burdens now carried by huge solids.

But the operators objected. They pictured themselves sweating under an almost impossible task every time there was a blow-out or other necessity for changing tires on the road. And they didn't like the picture.

Thus the general adoption of the giant pneumatic for rapid hauling has been hampered, while man turned his inventive faculties toward the idea of simplifying the operation.

The idea came. It was developed. The announcement was made by H. S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber company. Mr. Firestone is also president of the Firestone Steel Products company, in whose experimental shops the idea was developed. As it involves the manufacture of a new wheel design and the Firestone companies are not wheel manufacturers, it was passed on to the wheel producers.

The new wheel design has a slot in its felloe. To remove a tire, after jacking up the truck the wheel is turned until the part of it containing this slot is nearest the ground, which is just caved by the tire. Clamps and wedge ring hold the rim to the wheel and engage the valve in the slot. These are removed and the tire is readily pulled from the wheel. In applying the inflated tire, the wheel is turned so that the slot is at the bottom, the inflated tire is worked toward the wheel and the valve is engaged in the slot. After the valve is properly registered in the slot a turn of the wheel swings the tire into place with stop plate seated in key way. No difficult lifting is necessary.

He posted the letter, and by the morning's mail received one from Lucy written a few hours after his departure from home. She inclosed the item he had read on the train and wrote:

"I thought you might not see it. I have seen Miss Fanny and she has got him up to a room by himself. Oh, poor Bledsoe! Everything I have been thinking so constantly of is mother and it seemed to me that I have never seen her more distinctly. How lovely she was—and how she loved him!"

If Lucy had not written this letter

Eugene might not have done the odd thing he did that day. He was an adventurer; if he had lived in the sixteenth century he would have sailed the unknown new seas, but having been born in the latter part of the nineteenth, when geography was a fairly well-settled matter, he had come an explorer in mechanics. But the fact that he was a "hard-headed business man" as well as an adventurer did not keep him from having a queer spot in his brain, because hard-headed business men are as susceptible to such spots as adventurers are. Two weeks after Isabel's death, Eugene was in New York on urgent business and found that the delayed arrival of a steamer gave him a day with nothing to do. His room at the hotel had become intolerable; outdoors was intolerable; everything was intolerable. It seemed to him that he must see Isabel once more, hear her voice once more; that he must find some way to her, or lose his mind. Under this pressure he had gone, with complete skepticism, to a "trance-medium" of whom he had heard wild accounts from the wife of a business acquaintance.

The experience had been grotesque, and he came away with an encouraging message from his father, who had failed to identify himself satisfactorily, but declared that everything was "on a higher plane" in his present state of being, and that his life was "continuous and progressive." Mrs. Horner spoke of herself as a "psychic," but otherwise she seemed oddly unpretentious and matter-of-fact; and Eugene had no doubt at all of her sincerity. He went to Mrs. Horner's after his directors' meeting today. He used the telephone booth in the directors' room to make the appointment; and he laughed feebly at himself, and wondered what the group of men in that mahogany apartment would think if they knew what he was doing. Mrs. Horner had changed her address, but he found the new one, and somebody purporting to be a niece of hers talked to him and made an appointment for a "sitting" at five o'clock.

Mrs. Horner appeared in the doorway, a woman and unimpeachable-looking woman in brown, with thin hair artificially waved—but not recently—and parted in the middle over a bluish forehead. Her eyes were small and seemed weak, but she recognized the visitor.

"Oh, you been here before," she said, in a thin voice, not unamused. "I recollect you. Quite a time ago, wasn't it?"

"Yes, quite a long time."

"I recollect because I recollect you was disappointed. Anyway, you was kind of cross." She laughed faintly.

"I'm sorry if I seemed so," Eugene said, "what was it?"

"All right," she assented, dropped into the leather chair, with her back to the shaded window. "You better set down, too, I reckon. I hope you'll get something this time so you won't feel cross, but I dunno. I can't never tell what they'll do. Well—"

She sighed, closed her eyes, and was silent, while Eugene, seated in the stiff chair across the table from her, watched her profile, thought himself an idiot, and called himself that and other names. And as the silence continued, and the imposture woman in the easy-chair remained impassive, he began to wonder what had led him to be such a fool. What had brought him back to this absurd place and caused him to be watching this absurd woman taking a nap in a chair? In brief: What the devil did he mean by it? He had not the slightest interest in Mrs. Horner's naps—or in her teeth, which were being slightly revealed by the unconscious parting of her lips, as her

How long was he going to sit here presiding over this unknown woman's slumbers? It struck him that to make the picture complete he ought to be shooting flies away from her with a palm-leaf fan.

Mrs. Horner's parted lips closed again abruptly, and became compressed; her shoulders moved a little, then jerked repeatedly; her small chest heaved; she gasped, and the compressed lips relaxed to a slight contortion, then began to move, whispering and bringing forth indistinguishable mutterings.

Suddenly she spoke in a loud, husky voice:

"Lopa is here!"

"Yes," Eugene said dryly. "That's what you said last time. I remember 'Lopa.' She's your 'control' I think you said?"

"Yes, 'Lopa,'" said the husky voice. "You mean I'm to suppose you're not Mrs. Horner now?"

"Never was Mrs. Horner!" the voice declared, speaking undeniably from Mrs. Horner's lips—but with such conviction that Eugene, in spite of everything, began to feel himself in the presence of a third party, who was none the less an individual, even though she might be another edition of the apparently somnambulistic Mrs. Horner. "Never was Mrs. Horner or anybody but just Lopa. Guide."

"You mean you're Mrs. Horner's guide?" he asked.

"Your guide now," said the voice with emphasis, to which was inconspicuously added a low laugh. "You came here once before. Lopa remembers."

"Yes—so did Mrs. Horner."

Lopa overlooked his implication, and continued quickly: "You build. Build things that go. You came here once and old, gentleman on this side, he spoke to you. Same old gentleman here now. He tell Lopa he's your grandfather—no, he says 'father.' He's your father."

"What's his appearance?"

"How?"

"What does he look like?"

"Very fine! White beard, but not long beard. He says some one else wants to speak to you. See, here, Lady. Not his wife, though. No. Very fine lady! Fine lady, fine lady!"

"Is it my sister?" Eugene asked.

"Sister? No. She is shaking her head. She has pretty brown hair. She is fond of you. She is some one who knows you very well, but she is not your sister. She is very anxious to say something to you—very anxious. Very fond of you; very anxious to talk to you. Very glad you came here—oh, very glad!"

"What is her name?"

"Name," the voice repeated, and seemed to ruminate. "Name hard to get—always very hard for Lopa. Name. She wants to tell me her name to tell you. She wants you to understand names are hard to make. She says you must think of something that makes a sound. Here the voice seemed to put a question to an invisible presence and to receive an answer. "A little sound or a big sound? She says it might be a little sound or a big sound. She says a ring—oh, Lopa knows! She means a bell! That's it, a bell."

Eugene looked grave. "Does she mean her name is Belle?"

"Not quite. Her name is longer."

"Perhaps," he suggested, "she means that she was a belle."

"No. She says she thinks you know what she means. She says you must think of a color. What color?" Again Lopa addressed the unknown. But this time seemed to wait for an answer.

"Perhaps she means the color of her eyes?" said Eugene.

"No. She says her color is light—it's a light color and you can see through it."

"Amber?" he said, and was startled, for Mrs. Horner, with her eyes still closed, clapped her hands, and the voice cried out in delight:

"Yes! She says you know who she is from amber. Amber! Amber! That's it! She says you understand what her name is from a bell and from amber. She is laughing and waving a lace handkerchief at me because she is pleased. She says I have made you know who it is."

This was the strangest moment of Eugene's life, because, while it lasted, he believed that Isabel Amberson, who was dead, had found means to speak to him. Though within ten minutes he doubted it, he believed it then.

His elbows pressed hard upon the table, and his head between his hands, he leaned forward, staring at the commonplace figure in the easy-chair. "What does she wish to say to me?"

"She is happy because you know her. No—she is troubled. Oh—a great trouble! Something she wants to tell you. She wants so much to tell you. She wants Lopa to tell you. This is a great trouble. She says—oh, yes, she wants you to be—to be kind! That's what she says. That's it. To be kind."

"Does she—"

"She wants you to be kind," said the voice. "She nods when I tell you this. Yes; it must be right. She is a very fine lady. Very pretty. She is so anxious for you to understand. She hopes and hopes you will. Some one else wants to speak to you. This is a man. He says—"

"I don't want to speak to any one else," said Eugene quickly. "I want—"

"This man who has come says that he is a friend of yours. He says—"

Eugene struck the table with his list. "I don't want to speak to any one else, I tell you!" he cried passionately. "If she is there I—!" He caught his breath sharply, checked himself, and sat in amazement. Could his mind so easily accept so stupendous a thing as truth? Evidently it could!

Mrs. Horner spoke languidly in her own voice: "Did you get anything satisfactory?" she asked. "I certainly hope it wasn't like that other time when you was cross because they couldn't get anything for you." "No, no," he said hastily. "This was different. It was very interesting."

He said her, went to his hotel, and thence to his train for home. Never did he seem to move through a world of dream-stuff; for he knew that he was not more credulous than other men, and if he could believe what he had believed, though he had believed it for no longer than a moment or two, what hold had he or any other human being on reality?

His credulity vanished (or so he thought) with his recollection that it was he, and not the alleged "Lopa," who had suggested the word "amber." Going over the mortifying, plain facts of his experience, he found that Mrs. Horner, or the subdivision of Mrs. Horner known as "Lopa," had told him to think of a bell and of a color, and that being furnished with these scientific data, he had leaped to the conclusion that he spoke with Isabel Amberson!

For a moment he had believed that Isabel was there, believed that she was close to him, entreating him—screaming him "to be kind." But with this recollection a strange agitation came upon him. After all, had she not spoken to him? If his own unknown consciousness had told the "psychic's" unknown consciousness how to make the picture of the pretty brown-haired, brown-eyed lady, hadn't the true Isabel—oh, indeed her very soul—called to him out of his own true memory of her?

And as the train roared through the darkened evening he looked out beyond his window, and saw her as he had seen her on his journey, a few days ago—an ethereal figure flying beside the train, but now it seemed to him that she kept her face toward his window with an infinite wistfulness.

"To be kind!" If it had been Isabel, was that what she would have said? If she were anywhere, and could come to him through the invisible wall, what would be the first thing she would say to him?

Ab, well enough, and perhaps bitterly enough, he knew the answer to that question! "To be kind"—to George!

A red cap at the station, when he arrived, leaped for his bag, abandoning another which the Pullman porter had handed him. "Yes, yes, Miss Morgan. Yes, yes. You can wait in front the station for you, Miss Morgan, sir."

And people in the crowd about the gates turned to stare, as he passed through, whispering, "That's Morgan."

Outside, the neat chauffeur stood at the door of the touring car like a soldier in whiplash.

"I'll not go home now, Harry," said Eugene, when he had got in. "Drive to the City hospital."

"Yes, sir," the man returned. "Miss Lucy's there. She said she expected you'd come there before you went home."

"She did?"

"Yes, sir."

Eugene stared. "I suppose Mr. Minner must be pretty bad," he said.

"Yes, sir. I understand he's liable to get well, though, sir." He moved his lever into high speed, and the car went through the heavy traffic like some fast, faithful beast that knew its way about, and knew its master's need of haste. Eugene did not speak again until they reached the hospital.

Fanny met him in the upper corridor, and took him to an open door.

He stopped on the threshold, startled; for, from the warden face on the pillow, almost it seemed the eyes of Isabel herself were looking at him; never before had the resemblance between mother and son been so strong—and Eugene knew that now he had once seen it thus startlingly, he need divest himself of no bitterness "to be kind" to George.

George was startled, too. He lifted a white hand in a queer gesture, half-forsaking, half-impugning, and then let his arm fall back upon the coverlet.

"You must have thought my mother wanted you to come," he said, "so that I could ask you to—forgive me."

But Lucy, who sat beside him, lifted ineffable eyes from him to her father.

PLANS FIGHT ON WHITE PLAGUE

Government to Take Leading Part in National Program.

62,000 REJECTED FOR ARMY

Figures Revealed in Tabulation of Draft Reject Slips Arouses Officials to Necessity of Taking Vigorous Action to Stamp Out Tuberculosis—Over Million Active Cases in Country—150,000 Deaths a Year.

Alarmed by the loss of men power caused by tuberculosis during the war, Uncle Sam is pushing up the M. D., which is among the many letters that follow his name, and preparing to take a leading part in the national program for the prevention of the disease.

Final tabulation of the draft reject slips, just completed, reveals: Sixty-two thousand men were rejected when called for service in the National army because medical examination showed they had tuberculosis.

Another 20,000 men were discharged at army camps for the same reason. Six thousand, still in service, are now being cared for in the army's special tuberculosis hospitals.

As these figures show, the government, at a time of a great national emergency, was robbed of the services of approximately enough men for five army divisions by the ravages of this, one disease. But this is not all, for, although progress has been made in the control of the disease during the last ten years, it still is the cause of 150,000 deaths annually in this country, and as scientific investigation has shown, for every death from the disease there are eight active cases.

1,200,000 Cases in United States. This indicates that at the present time there are in the United States at least 1,200,000 active cases of the white plague.

At the annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis association in Atlantic City, June 14 to 17, federal, state and local public health authorities outlined a co-ordinate national plan of battle against the disease. One result of this, it is expected, will be the creation of a division of tuberculosis in the United States public health service, a bill for which will soon be introduced.

Already, as the government's first step in protecting the nation's health during the reconstruction era, the United States public health service has been authorized to provide free hospital care for soldiers and sailors suffering from tuberculosis, honorably discharged on or after October 6, 1917. These patients will be treated in government sanitariums.

Caring for 62,000 Sufferers.

The even graver problem of caring for the 62,000 sufferers who were turned back into civil life by the draft has been assumed by the National Tuberculosis association in co-operation with the surgeon general's office, through 1,500 state and local societies which are affiliated with the national association, and some 600 sanitariums and 500 dispensaries are already available for the work.

The situation is so serious, however, that the national program calls for hospital and sanitarium provision in every state in the Union that will provide, as a minimum, at least two beds for every annual death, as well as dispensary and clinic care so that every man, woman and child in the state who has tuberculosis, or thinks he has it, or who may have been exposed to it in any way, can secure free advice and treatment or treatment at moderate expenses.

MAN LIVES A CENTURY

Activity, Optimism and Temperance Will Lead to Longevity.

The wish of Abner Lincoln's friends, often expressed, that he might live to be 100 years old, has come true, this former having just celebrated in Philadelphia the occasion of that many years in the world. Mr. Lincoln, who is still going strong, has asked his friends to make the ante ten years more now that he has passed the century mark. Congratulatory letters and birthday cards from China and Korea were received by the aged man on his natal day, while friends here literally showered him with flowers.

Asked for a recipe for such a long life, Mr. Lincoln replied that they were activity, optimism and temperance, with the accent on the last qualification. "Liquor never did good for anyone except as medicine," declares the centenarian, "and it has been the cause of a great deal of harm."

Lincoln thinks that though prohibition won't come in a day, it will arrive eventually. Awaiting that happy time he is still tobaccoing tobacco and alcohol, as he has done all his life, and is eating his three squares a day. Though not directly related to Abraham Lincoln, some connection exists generations back. His grandfather fought in the revolution and his grandsons are veterans of the late war. He was born in New England.

"A large percentage of industrial fuel users," says the American Mining Congress in an appeal to its members to do all they can to avert a coal shortage, "are treating lightly the warnings of the National Coal Association that industrial consumers of power coal are facing a shortage in supply when the peak of the coal movement arrives. For the guidance of our members we wish to place the following analysis, before them and to urge that every one cooperate to urge quick development for early delivery of all needed fuel. Possibly some statements made in the campaign to build the market have been overdrawn, but a consideration of the combined elements controlling the situation leads to the conclusion that the most complete cooperation between buyers, railroads and producers will be necessary to meet market requirements. We submit the following facts upon which the conclusion is based:

"Anthracite producers are meeting fine response and every ton is sold as fast as produced. Domestic fuel orders, in the east especially, are well balanced.

"Industrial consumers were led to over-buy under stimulus of the Fuel Administration propaganda and at a war-time price. Thousands thus over-supplied are using coal on hand and withholding orders for possible price decline. Logically every element points to continued established price or higher level. Coal mines can only produce when transportation is available. The rush for coal cars will come in the early fall about the time that the wheat crop begins to move.

"The task of moving these two commodities is, in normal years, enormous, and this year, with car shortage in sight, Europe crying for food and a stiff wheat price forcing every bushel into market there will be a jam everywhere.

"Because of lack of orders, coal men have been unable to estimate to the Railroad Administration the probable movement, hence Director Hines has been unable to make plans, but 4,000 extra locomotives have been put in condition and held in reserve. More new locomotives have been delivered since January 1st last, than were delivered all last year. Statements estimating the number of coal cars unfit for service at 40,000 with 150,000 of these unserviceable on one line alone (the Pennsylvania railroad) seem not to be borne out by railroad figures, but nine per cent, or fully 50,000 of the open-tops are either out of commission or in the shops. There has been costly delay in making repairs and in replacing worn-out rolling stock—many railroads refusing to meet the repair bills and holding the administration responsible. Mr. Hines has solved the situation by taking responsibility and today every available repair man is at work, and 5,000 Pennsylvania cars are in outside shops under contract.

"The enormous advance in cost of building new cars, 50,000 box, 25,000 gondolas and 25,000 other open-tops, led to refusal of many companies to accept the new cars at the war-contract price, and Director Hines is appointing a trustee to place the new cars in service, control their movement and settle the price later.

"Another element which will control is labor. Even if the wage increase is avoided—and many producers expect the increase—a coal miner can only produce so many pounds per day. He can only be multiplied to the mine capacity, and unless the cars can be moved—empties in and loaded out—the mine cannot produce to capacity. If the wage increase comes, hundreds of 'high cost' properties may be forced to close down, thus lessening the supply.

"There are no sensational disclosures coming as has been promised, to show direct incompetency but a state of war could hardly produce a more effective block to normal movement of fuel."

VETERAN STURDY AT 87; TELLS WHY

"Although 87, I am as strong and vigorous now as I was 30 years ago," said Charles Robbins, 3711 N. Fifteenth street, Philadelphia, a Civil War veteran.

"However, stomach trouble was gradually getting the best of me until a few weeks ago when I started to take Tanlac. Tanlac improved my appetite, increased my strength and endurance and restored my energy and vigor. I work at my trade as gardener every day now and never feel tired and worn out as before."

Tanlac is just the thing for old folks. Nervousness, headaches, depression of spirits, loss of appetite, backaches, flatulency, sleeplessness and that run-down feeling are characteristic symptoms of their troubles, and Tanlac acts like magic when it brings back restful sleep, sound digestion, more vitality and drives away that dependant feeling so quickly that it actually astonishes you. Tanlac is sold here by Beighler's Pharmacy, Connelville Drug Store, Fred Harmon's Pharmacy.

THE SOISSON.

"DESTINY"—Starring Dorothy Phillips, supported by a cast of well known screen artists, is today's feature attraction. The picture has an intensely dramatic theme. It deals with the conflict between a sister, played by Miss Phillips, and her brother, played by William Stowell, in which the latter's lust for power brings ruin to himself and others. It tells a gripping story of modern life. Mary Burton loved Jefferson Edwards, her girlhood sweetheart. But Hamilton Murton, her brother, the star of Wall street, who knew no law but his own, forbade her to marry him. It was not the first time the wills of the brother and sister had clashed. Up to that time Hamilton had had his way. But in the matter of love Mary was not to be gainsaid. With all his immense financial power Hamilton had set about causing Edward's ruin. He succeeded, but grim fate stepped in. Others went down in Edward's crash. One of them, maddened at the loss of fortune and reputation, set out to kill Burton. Edwards intervened. Into his heart went the bullet destined for Hamilton. Agitated at the run he had brought, Hamilton sought out his sister, only to see her shudder from him in repulsion and to hear her denounce him as her sweetheart's slayer. The production will also be presented tomorrow.

THE PARADISE.

"FOOLS AND THEIR MONEY"—A five act Metro comedy of high society and social climbers, with Emory Wehlen in the leading role is being presented today. The play offers a decidedly original plot with many unexpected and complicated situations. The story is that of a society seeking wife of a munitions millionaire and a family of century old aristocrats. The social climber, seeking herself with all the glory that money can buy sets out to purchase a place in society. Although she obtains a home adjoining a family high in the social almanac, she soon finds that the gift that divides them can never be bridged. The daughter of the blue-blooded family, however, is tired of her hedged in social groove, and in the absence of her parents decides to embark on an adventure of her own. The project is supervised by that wily young person, Cupid, who recognizes no social laws. The consequence is a breezy romance as fresh and fragrant as a day in spring. Miss Wehlen is charming as the young aristocrat and she is ably supported by such artists as Jack Munnell, Charles Malles and Mollie McConnell. One of the many unusual attractions of the picture is a big fox hunt in which over 100 smartly clad men and women take part. The hunt starts from a famous country club and continues for many miles over the beautiful pastures and meadows of lower California. A selected comedy is also being shown.

Strange New Cure For Influenza "Saves" Y. M. C. A. Girl Entertainer

Miss Annette Farrar, concert singer and Y. M. C. A. entertainer overseas, got the "flu" and it straightway led to complications.

Instead of prescribing a change of air, or occupation, for a while, Capt. Goodrich T. Smith, young Yale man and New York physician, decided upon a daring experiment.

He ordered a change of name. Miss Farrar will obey the doctor's orders.

Dr. Smith went overseas as a member of the Army Medical Corps. He saw service on all the American fronts up to the time of the armistice, with an unusual number of narrow escapes in his work with the ambulances and at first aid stations.

Miss Farrar studied music in Berlin and London, and was in light opera for some time before going on the concert stage. Dr. Smith has a home at 319 Audubon Avenue, New York City.
